What is PAS?

PAS provides assistance with performing activities of daily living that an individual would typically perform if he or she did not have a disability, similar to home caregivers or paraprofessionals.

PAS may only be provided to those with a “targeted disability”, which the Federal Office of Personnel

Management (OPM) lists to include: deafness; blindness; missing extremities; partial paralysis; complete paralysis; convulsive disorders; intellectual disabilities; mental illness; and distortion of limb and/or spine. Those receiving the services include current employees, visitors, and job applicants who need assistance in performing activities of daily living to ensure that those individuals have equal employment opportunities and equal access to, and in, all relevant HHS facilities, by providing assistance.
